

ABSTRACT

Predictions of diffractive, total, and total-inelastic cross sections, based on the RENORM pre-LHC Renormalization Model of Diffraction, are compared with the latest experimental results and extended to forthcoming measurements at higher LHC energies, future colliders, and cosmic-ray interactions.